Bio Magnetic Therapy is the application of magnets to the body to stimulate the nerves and create a better blood flow to various parts of the body. In turn, this helps the organs and glands to function better. Medicine itself is considered irrelevant as no medicine is orally fed or injected with magnetic therapy. It is a clinical system in which the human ailments are treated with magnets of various size and strengths and use both north and south poles together or individually. Magnetized water and juices are also used in conjunction with magnet application.

How to use Magnetic Bracelet

Iron makes up about 4% of the blood that flows through the body. Since iron is attracted to magnets, when magnetic objects are placed on a specific area of the body this attracts the blood flow to that area. This brings increased oxygen and nutrients to the area and the muscles, since they are also getting increased blood flow, tend to lengthen and become more relaxed. In a typical treatment, small magnets are attached to the acupuncture points of the body by means of adhesive tape. As the magnets polarize they act in a pulsating manner much like that of manipulating acupuncture needles, with the exception that there is no insertion of needles into the body and no pain associated with this therapy.
